Professionalism in Practice: Toward a More Inclusive Legal Profession

March 4-5, 2010

Chicago Bar Association

321 South Plymouth Court, Chicago, IL

Professionalism in Practice: Toward a More Inclusive Legal Profession is a cutting-edge, two-day forum during which lawyers and judges teach law students – and law students teach lawyers and judges – about Professionalism in the Law and inclusivity within the profession.

Participants' ages will range from 20s to 60s+. Lawyers and judges participate in this forum by invitation only. To ensure a robust exchange of views, the program seeks law students from diverse backgrounds – gender, race, ethnicity, nationality, age, religion, LGBT, disability, geography, etc. – and will assess applications accordingly. Space is limited.

Applicants: Please respond in Word or Word Perfect format. If selected, you will be participating in a networking opportunity for your education and career development. Consequently, participants are asked to commit to attend the entire program.

In a separate attachment:

1. Describe how your background and life experiences can contribute to the diversity of views in this fellowship (e.g., first in family to attend higher education; economic hardship; language barriers; race/ethnicity; disability; national origin; sexual orientation; etc.). You might consider submitting your law school application “Personal Statement” for this description or in addition to this description.
2. Explain what Legal Professionalism meant to you before law school. Has this “meaning” changed since you began law study? If there is a change, also explain what it means to you today.
3. Provide your resume, which must include your mailing address.
